

Beville Dunkerley

Beville Darden Dunkerley first came to Westminster Presbyterian in 1994 as a Freshman at Vanderbilt, looking up 'Presbyterian churches' in the Yellow Pages to find somewhere to go on Easter Sunday. It felt like home from the minute she sat in the pew. A Birmingham, Alabama native who grew up at Independent Presbyterian Church, Beville also fell in love with Nashville while at Vanderbilt and decided to make it her home – with a brief detour in New York City to chase career dreams. She currently works in the music industry as the VP of Marketing at an artist management firm, after working at Nashville's WTVF and WSM, along with stints at Rolling Stone magazine and SiriusXM. Her husband, Mark Dunkerley, grew up at Westminster Presbyterian, and she was introduced to him by fellow church member, Laurin Howell. Mark and Beville are the proud parents of two boys, Hayes and Luke.
